

GOVERNMENT WAS SUSTAINED BY MAJORITY OF ONE VOTE

80 Against, and 79 for Amendment—Powers of Senate Are Limited—Many New Speakers on the Floor—Reform Party Supported the Government—Regrettable Interruptions Towards End—Large Attendance At Last Night's Session.

The Ball Room of the Union was well filled last night when the Mock Parliament assembled for the final session for this term. The Reform Party, which has been the subject of much speculation in political circles recently, turned out in full force and had the largest representation at the Opening of Parliament.

Many staunch supporters of the Government were there, while the Opposition ran the Reformers a close second in numbers. It was a noticeable feature of last evening's session that there were quite a few of the fair sex present in the gallery.

The evening's activities were formally opened when the Governor General, represented by Basil McLean, of the Students' Council, took the Chair and delivered the speech from the Throne. He outlined the various phases through which the country has been passing and stated that the Dominion was now emerging from a stage of depression that the time was now opportune to inaugurate a revision of taxation. Emphasis was laid on the scarcity of settlers in this vast country. Emigration has been on the increase recently and agencies have been established in Europe, under Government control, with a view to turning the streams of desirable immigrants to our unsettled portions. Mention was made of the trade Treaties concluded with Australia and France.

The Governor General then advised the Members that they would be invited to decide on the question of a Canadian Embassy to Washington. The main issue of the evening's session, was the last item to be mentioned in the Speech—the Bill for Senate Reform.

It was moved by L. Edel, of the Government, that an address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, for the well-defined and important speech which he delivered to the House. This Member stated that he represented the Constituency of Walla Walla, Sask., and was fully aware of the necessity of increasing immigration and of the benefits to be derived therefrom. "A great economic structure has been built up in Canada," he went on. "And, at present, this country is prepared to accommodate four times its present population. Consequently the importance of immigration cannot be exaggerated." The speaker then stressed the importance of the West in the development of the Dominion and regretted the fact that there was a tendency in politics to be partial to the East.

At this point Glasco, of the Opposition, rose to a point of order as to the composition of the House, but his objection was ruled out. The Hon. Member from Walla Walla pointed out, in continuing, that the present geographical division between the East and West may become a more serious division, should the present treatment of the West continue. Objection was taken by Forsey, of the Reform Party, to certain terms employed by Walla Walla's representative which he maintained, were reflections on the mental calibre of the House. The Speaker, however, held that the Member had been within his rights in using the "gentle terms" under discussion.

Edel concluded by stating that continued rejection of the Government's Bill to curb the powers of the Senate would only result in greater determination on the part of Government, Davies, of St. Theresa, seconded Edel's motion that an address be forwarded to the Governor General.

An amendment to the Bill was moved by Jack Quinlan, of Hs Majesty's most loyal Opposition. He elaborated on the great importance of the Senate and stated that it was an indispensable part of the Government; the passage of the proposed Bill would eliminate this essential element. The Member concluded amidst loud applause.

Humphrey, in seconding this motion for the amendment explained the functions of the Senate and how it prevents one section from swamping another on any issue. He cited the case of the Maritime Provinces; they were having hard times, but could always look to the Senate for help. The Speaker then announced the moving and seconding of the amendment to the Bill.

As there were expected to be several new men on the floor, Lloyd, of the Government, suggested that each new man introduce himself before speaking in order that members of the "Lit", and others, might recognize him, and might be able in consequence to pick out future debaters. It was pointed out, however, by the Speaker that it was out of order for any Member to mention his own or any other Member's name.

PLAYERS' CLUB HAS STAGE LOCATION

Permission Obtained to Erect Stage in Biological Bldg.

The executive of the Players club have an extensive programme to submit to the members of the Club at the general meeting to be held Friday, Dec. 19th in the Ball Room of the Union.

Among the many items of particular interest to the well-wishers of the club are the announcements that Dr. Lloyd has given permission for the erection of a permanent stage in the ground floor from the Biological Bldg. Mr. J. A. Taylor and Mr. A. P. R. Condon are ready to produce. Selection of plays is to be made in the first place by the producers with the approval of the Executive, casting to be done by producers with the aid of a Committee of their own appointment. Members of the staff are to be asked to join the Club on an equal footing with students.

Mr. Bruce Ross will be Stage Manager in charge of appointments for all the plays. Mr. Oxley will have construction of the stage etc. The charge of business arising from the Students' Council is to be asked to grant an appropriation to defray expenses. The Executive will approach the Community Players with a view to borrowing lighting requisites etc.

While nothing definite is yet suggested with regard to price of admission, publicity etc., the Executive hope that the matter will receive attention in the general meeting. To repeat, one approximate date of the first production is set for the end of February and it is expected that

DECEMBER 31 ONLY 12 HOURS LONG

McGill Adopts Chronology Of Naval Observatory

From the New Year, McGill Observatory will conform to the new chronology for astronomers and navigators which came into effect at the Naval Observatory at Washington on midnight, December 31 and will begin to reckon the days from midnight to midnight instead of from noon to noon as seamen and navigators have done in times past. The change is necessary since McGill University uses the nautical almanac of the Naval Observatory. It is presumed that all stations of this kind will adopt the new system.

Harvard College Observatory has already informed McGill that it proposes to adopt the new chronology and has asked that communications between the two observatories on astronomical matters, continue.

It follows from the adoption of the new chronology, that the last day of this year in astronomical and nautical circles will be only twelve hours long, from noon on December 31 to midnight of the same day. The change has been adopted to avoid confusion with the civil reckoning of days.

Announcements will be reckoned from the Greenwich mean midnight time and designated Greenwich civil time. Under the new chronology the Julian Day will be considered as coincident with the civil day and its proposed designation is Julian Civil Day. The first Julian Civil Day will bear for astronomers the number 242452.

All arrangements for commencement will be settled before the beginning of the Xmas vacation.

SOLAR AND ATOM SYSTEM CONTRASTED

Dr. Eve Addressed Royal Astronomical Society
MANY ATTEND

Thanks Due Rutherford and Bohr for Researches

That on knowledge of the atom is based upon the facts which we have ascertained regarding the solar system was pointed out by Dr. Eve last night in the course of an illuminating address on the comparison and contrast of these two systems.

Dr. Eve began by stating that there was a time when the atom was considered as being a round indivisible body; but recent scientific research has shown that the atom can be divided into its constituent parts. Similarly, there was a time when people believed the earth was flat and that the sun moved around the earth. By the evolution in thought of the latter movement, referring in turn to a series of slides, the speaker traced the various theories advanced by Tycho, Copernicus, Kepler and Newton who stated the laws of gravitation but did not explain them.

By means of diagrams Dr. Eve proceeded to further illustrate his subject plotting the relative position of the various planets in respect to the sun. To fully appreciate this diagram the speaker humorously remarked that it could best be done by considering yourself a sort of arch-angel looking down on the solar system. By a series of figures he estimated the various distances of each planet, in turn from the sun.

In considering next the phenomena of the atom Dr. Eve stated that instead of viewing the findings of scientists in a critical manner we should be amazed at the remarkable progress made in this field of research. By way of introduction to this phase of his subject Dr. Eve performed several electrical tests with ebony rods, by which he illustrated the positive and negative qualities of the electrons.

In 1911 Sir Ernest Rutherford began experiments in this field, and discovered that these electrons went through the atom; that in each atom was a sort of central sun and round about it the electrons so, repelling and attracting in turn. By use of a further series of slides Dr. Eve went on to explain the various laws by which the constituent parts of the atom react to the various forces.

In conclusion, Dr. Eve said that as the physicists were concerned this theory was very satisfactory, but the great difficulty with it was that it did not explain a thing in Chemistry. But, thanks to Rutherford and Bohr we have reduced the atomic theory to one that is similar to that of the solar system.

A vote of thanks was moved by Col. Lyman, in which he paid special tribute to the untiring and noble efforts of Dr. Eve to make the Astronomical Society a success.

It was pointed out, however, by the Speaker that it was out of order for any Member to mention his own or any other Member's name.

Speaker, the leader of the Reform Party was the next speaker. "It is with much sadness," he said, "that I arise on the floor to speak to-night. Never has a speech from the Throne so barren of important items been delivered, and never has it been my misfortune to hear such a vacuous amendment to a motion." These opening remarks caused a divergence of sentiment—applause and booing being both in evidence.

Reform of the Senate along the lines laid down by the Irish Free State in 1922 was suggested by the Member. He stressed the fact that these ideas represented the crystallization of political experience of past years. He then went on to an enumeration of the principal points of interest in the Irish Constitution and drew several contrasts to the system now in vogue in Canada. The greatest advantage of the Irish system, he explained, was that the Senate may demand a referendum from the people on anything on which they disagree.

In concluding, the Reform Leader said that he noted with regret the deplorable tactics recently employed by both sides, and likened them to "those people who keep the Sabbath—and everything else they can." The next speaker was another Member of the Reform Party—Jackel, who in refuting some of Edel's statements referred to him as "the" (Continued on page 3)

WOMEN STUDENTS NOT INVITED

FAST CONTESTS

Improved Playing Seen in Fresh-Soph. League

The Science II basketball team added more laurels to itself by beating the fast Dental aggregation in one of the Fresh-Soph league games at Molson's Hall yesterday. By overcoming their opponents they continue to lead the league with a record of three straight victories and no defeats. Throughout the game, they displayed remarkable team work which was largely responsible for their victory. The Dentists, on the other hand, seemed to have lost some of their accuracy for shooting which was evident in their previous games. Frith and Valentine were outstanding for the victors accounting for more than ten points each. Harman and Berwick played well for the Dents. At the end of the game the score was thirty-one to sixteen in science.

In the second game of the evening, the Pharmacy I quintette defeated the first year Dentals in a fast but one-sided game. The embryo drug dispensers played a stellar all-round game while the "tooth pullers", although playing a consistent game could not penetrate their opponents' defence. The first half ended with Pharmacy on the long end of a 9-0 score.

With the start of the second half, Dentals tried hard to score, but only succeeded in counting three points on fouls. The game ended with the score standing 22-3 in favour of Pharmacy.

The outstanding man on the floor was Krasnoff who had an uncanny way of netting shots from all angles. Every man on the Dentistry line-up did his best, but the team outclassed by Pharmacy's superior aggregation. By virtue of their victory Pharmacy went into a tie with Science I for first place. The schedule will be continued after the holidays.

R.V.C. TAKES TWO GAMES FROM Y.W.C.A.

Basketball Played in Latter's Gymnasium

WIDE MARGINS

Opponents Fought Hard, Pulled Up Score In Second Half

Last evening, in the Y. W. C. A. gym both the R. V. C. basketball teams were victorious in their matches against the Y. W. C. A. first and second teams. Though both games were won by good margins the Y. W. C. A. never yielded a point without a struggle, and in the second half of each match they pulled up considerably.

The first game was marred by fouls nine being listed against the Y. W. C. A. and three against R. V. C. The teams worked well however and made good showing. Miss Amaron and Miss Paterson were outstanding among the Y. W. ranks and for R. V. C. it, Dunton played especially well.

First Team
Immediately after the toss-up, the ball was carried up to the R. V. C. end where P. Perry scored a pretty shot within the first few seconds of the game. The Y. W. C. A. retaliated with a shot by Miss Paterson. For the next few seconds the ball was at the R. V. C. end of the field, but no score was made. Miss Amaron of the Y. W. C. A. showed up very well, while R. Dunton with K. Russell put in some excellent work for R. V. C. The score saw-sawed, until five all was reached, both teams scoring on a double foul. Then R. V. C. took the lead and kept it for the remainder of the game. The match however was not without a struggle; both teams fought hard throughout. Some pretty combination was shown at intervals by both teams and after the first ten minutes the score stood at 11-9 for R. V. C. T. Allen scored a point on a free shot and this was followed by a basket scored by P. Perry. Miss Paterson for the Y. W. C. A. netted a counter and it was not long before she followed it up with another. R. V. C. scored on two shots and for the rest of the period the play was at their end, when Allen scored six additional points, the Y. W. C. A. was awarded a free shot as the whistle sounded for half-time, but no score was made. The score was 23-11 for R. V. C.

The play in the second period started off with a rush. R. Dunton secured the ball and pressed to shots, the Y. W. guards intercepted and the ball was taken down to the Y. W. C. A. end of field. E. Brooks, as guards showed up well and the ball was given carried back to the R. V. C. end. The goals seemed to find some difficulty in finding the baskets, as shots were missed again and again. Finally the Y. W. C. A. were awarded a foul and Miss McFeet scored a point. There was a good deal of fumbling at the Y. M. goal and R. V. C. were awarded a free shot on a foul; no score was made however.

For several minutes the ball was worked up and down the field, the centres showing up very well, then Miss McFeet scored another goal for the Y. W. C. A. The players were very strenuous and numerous fouls were awarded though no score was made. After seven minutes of hard play R. V. C. scored their first goal of the period when L. Allen netted the ball. Miss Paterson added four points to Y. W. C. A. score and then the R. V. C. forwards made a special effort and it was not long before the score stood at 30-13 in favor of R. V. C. Miss Paterson for Y. W. C. A. played well though the R. V. C. guards put in some very good work. P. Perry scored a spectacular shot for R. V. C. A. another goal followed and in the last few seconds the Y. W. C. A. forwards each scored in turn, bringing the total to 34-24 in favour of R. V. C. In this period the Y. W. C. A. scored thirteen points to the eleven of R. V. C.

SECOND TEAM
The game started off with a scramble. R. V. C. was awarded a free shot though no score was made. L. Chalk getting the ball on the rebound scored the first goal of the game. The

WATER POLO TEAMS OUT FOR PRACTICE

Swimming Team to Practice at Rubenstein Baths During Holidays

A good number turned out for swimming and water polo practice last night. The practices have been poorly attended during the past few weeks and it is thought by some that the popular crossword puzzles have been distracting the absent ones.

The plunging Larson has been showing fine form making several plunges that show up well for his chances for the intercollegiate. The swimmers are doing good work. The relay race are going in good style, the time for these try outs being very encouraging. Several new men tried for the back stroke and although the showing was not good at first, compared with that of the more experienced men, the fellows worked hard and should show promise.

The water polo team had a short practice game and went through a fast and snappy workout. Combination and fast passing was the order of the day. Some of the men being so enthusiastic as to stay in the water practicing for over half an hour past the regular time. All the men who can possibly turn out are expected to be at the practice on Friday as it will be the last in the K. of C. tank until after the holidays. The following men are asked to visit the Rubenstein baths on St. George St. any time during holidays except on Tuesdays—Bourne, Vickerson, Adams, Munro, Clark, Kaine, Kyle, Forsythe, Parsons, Moore, Copping, Wohl, Marcou, McConnell, Shackel, Jaz-dine, Anson, McLaren, Goddard, Williams, Young George, Petzold, Mr. Vernot will be present and will give the men plenty of work to do. The coach has made it clear that if the players cannot turn out for 5 p.m., to do so earlier in the day.

MONTREAL, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1924.

ON EDITORIAL SANCTIMOSITY

This is in the nature of a confession. Last night we esconced ourself in the chair whence it is our wont to pour the soothing balm of wisdom upon the festering sores of petty animosities. Thus enthroned, we have been known to lend our steady hand to guide the faltering footsteps of an infant society making its debut in collegiate circles, and even on occasion to dispense words of praise and commendation to those whose efforts had found favor at the altar of our omniscience.

We recalled with pain the times when in righteous ire we rose to smite the transgressor of the students' social code, and repented that, flustered by the importance of our mission, we should have loosed against him the full force of our withering rebuke. On second thought, there was not need of half our attention to make him feel a pariah among men of scholarly deportment.

We had not sat long in the editorial chair when the Genius which inhabits it had inspired us to write on Introspection and its value as an inventory of psychical development and the proper application of intellectual gifts to an individual's sphere of social relationship. But one cannot go in for experimental psychology and write editorials as well. If we indulged in the former, we fear that honesty to ourself and to you, would necessitate the cessation of our ministrations. Again, even though the process be illuminating and instructive, to reason takes time, and college editors haven't any time to spare; so we write editorials instead.

There are occasions, we know, when it may appear that we use this space as a convenient safety-valve for our pent-up feelings; but we avow that we are ever actuated by a deep appreciation of our noble heritage as torch-bearers on the path of wisdom. That we are not now devoting ourself to some admonitory dissertation, is in part due to our afore-mentioned lapse into self-analysis, the startling results of which have temporarily rendered us incapable of properly discharging our onerous duties. Besides, the holiday spirit has pervaded even our normally imperturbable nature, and restored to it the milk of human kindness too often repressed by the vexatious problems which beset our station.

CONDENSED COMMENT

It does not devolve upon the editors of the Daily to offer any apologies for publishing the article criticized by our Correspondent in to-day's issue. The data utilized in the news item came directly from officials of the Athletic Board and of the B.W. and F. It was at the express request of those officials that the matter was given prominence on the front page of the Daily. Giving publicity to forthcoming athletic events is one of the functions of the college paper. But it is not within the scope of our jurisdiction to question the advisability of arrangements made by the Athletic Board of Control for these events, extraordinary as the arrangements may seem. We hope that in this case censure will be directed to where in all justice it should fall.

The demand upon Student Directories manifested yesterday was entirely satisfactory. There is every indication that the innovation is meeting with general approval. Contrary to expectation almost two thousand copies were available for distribution, and the greater part of this number was claimed by eager applicants. It is now certain that practically every student entitled to a copy will possess one before the holiday season begins. The janitors in the various buildings are cooperating in the distribution of the books.

McGILL CHESS CLUB TO PLAY NATIONALE

After a rest of almost three weeks, the McGill Chess Club will meet the Nationale Club on Tuesday Evening Dec. 23. The match will take place at the headquarters of the latter, the Nationale A. A. A. 80 Charter St. This adversary is by far the strongest that the club has had to encounter and some hard play is expected. Should McGill be fortunate enough to win, the club will stand a very good chance for the C. C. "B" trophy in the Montreal Chess League.

The club will be represented in this struggle by Prof. Slack, honorary president of the club, and well known in McGill Chess circles. A. Garolick, Arts '26, ex-president, and present holder of the McGill Chess Championship; L. Kirsner, Arts '26, president of the club; H. Lacey, Arts '28, who started the McGill Chess world by defeating many of its most prominent players. D. Echenberg, Med. '27, chess star of the faculty of Medicine; and A. Edol, Arts '27, secretary of the club. Chess enthusiasts are awaiting with interest the outcome of the match, which promises to be the most exciting one yet.

ELDERS MUST SYMPATHIZE WITH MINORS

Careful Direction Required During Period of Adolescence

MR. HUGH PATON

Delivers Last of a Series of Lectures

In the final instalment of a course of three lectures, on Adolescence, Mr. Hugh Paton M.A. showed phases of the great awakening which comes to the adolescent and how important it was to guide him at this period. He emphasized the new and greater conception that the young man has of God and how necessary it was to cultivate this aspect. He put before his audience the two great divisions of human gregariousness—the herd system, and the true system of fellowship, likening it to the disparity of a flock of sheep and an orchestra—the former banded together for their own ends, and the latter for a common ideal.

The adolescent, said Dr. Paton, is full of ability and desire to live adventurously—life for him is no good if not adventurous. Ice hockey he concedes to be the finest form of sport, because it is the most dangerous. He has no time for a tranquil life. Another predominant aspect of adolescent life is the newly awakened sense of beauty, when he will get up at four o'clock in the morning to see the sun rise. Now he wants to take the helm of his own life. And he should be allowed to do so—the only way for him to learn how to steer, is to steer, for a man must make mistakes, the main thing being not to commit the same fault twice. But the teacher and parent must be ready to give him a new start, for many adolescents have gone wrong in latter life through not being given a new chance.

"I know, the fact is," said Mr. Paton, "that the adolescent is a trying young cub." He is losing fast those qualities which made him so beautiful as a child. His frankness is fading—his beautiful face begins to break out, his voice becomes wheezy, and he has extremely strong ideas.

For now he has his own ideas and dreams, and wishes to go his own way. It is then that he is liable to break away, but, said the speaker, it takes two to make a rupture. Many sad stories have been written about sons leaving homes in this period of life, and love is the only way to prevent such ruptures. And the only love that is worth while is that which is puncture proof—endures all things. The adolescent has a new reluctance—he will not communicate his school affairs to his parents. He is reaching forward to the new world. Now is the time for that love which bears all things.

Another important characteristic of adolescence is the fact that it is extraordinarily sensitized. It will notice the slightest kindnesses or knocks. Mr. Paton said that the advice to "never punish a boy without praying for him" was the only way to do real good by punishment. "In this society, it is important to notice the difference between the herd life and the social life. The member of the herd does what the rest of the pack do because they do it, whereas society exists for the sake of a good life—One of the chief objects of education is to overcome the herd tendency in favour of the social. Susceptibility to mass suggestion must be avoided." If a man belongs to a Club and keeps only the ordinary rules of etiquette, he cannot go farther. "But," said the speaker "You cannot deal with God on the limited liability principle." "Many boys," he said, entered upon wrong courses through mass suggestion. They would often do for others what they never would do for themselves. Through this mass suggestion, the instincts of betting, gambling, drinking and other vices, are carried through the generations. He cited the instance of two parties of boys hiking through Spain. The first party on being invited to attend a bullfight, decided to do so to please their generous hosts, and much trouble resulted. The second party, who incidentally were scouts, due to excellent policy out of going to their great benefit.

He said that whenever he was admitting new boys, he would emphasize the personal responsibility of each boy to keep the school pure, for such a condition could only be brought about by co-operation of every single boy in the school. A particularly bad fault characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon boy was the tendency to laugh at foolish jokes, do foolish things, and go to bullfights, for fear of being a kill-joy. If a man enters a Club, he has the right to demand "What is that Society aiming at?" But above the connection of man-to-man, was the necessity of a close connection with God. Man had two ties in this life—the horizontal, to his fellow-man, and the vertical, to his God, and no man could subsist properly without the latter. And "If you worship God in man" as Dr. Paton said, "This is not true worship. In the real worship God transcends man."

GOVERNMENT WAS SUSTAINED BY MAJORITY OF 1 VOTE

Member from "Walla" thereby bringing down that gentleman's wrath and also much laughter from the House. Edol rose to a point of order and made the erroneous reference to his constituency corrected to Walla Walla, whereupon Jackel continued. As there was still considerable merriment in evidence, the Prime Minister suggested that the House preserve more silence as the will never again get the chance to listen to such a speech. This suggestion, however, did not serve to diminish the noise. The substance of Jackel's speech was that the Senate cannot restrict any Bill that has to do with money.

Diplock, of the Opposition, spoke next, and stated that he was convinced of the futility of further argument on this Bill.

Edel, the Hon. member from Shebo, believed that radical senate reform was necessary and that the power to cast out legislation unanimous in the Lower House, should not be given to a few. He cited the case of the Senate's defeat of the Hudson Bay Railway project. After sitting with the opposition to get his ideas clarified the speaker had seen light and passed over to the cross benches.

Janes outlined the government's stand for the preservation of the Nationality of Canada. The Senate was useful and often guaranteed safe legislation, but it is directly under the control of the Prime Minister. In this a democratic country, absolutism is not to be tolerated. He pointed out that Senators were drawn from the mounted interests of the Dominion and by their own interference had lost the power of veto on financial bills. He charged the Reformists with bringing unworthy Irish examples to influence Canadian policies. An elective Senate was impossible on account of the prejudices manifest in such a body, and of the necessity of wealth as election backing.

Hon. Forsey, following a leader of Sir John A. MacDonald's calibre, stood for a strong senate, not one with limited rights, but one with enough power to be an effective "watchdog of the treasury." He contended that the government wished the entire abolition of the Upper House but did not have the courage to say so. The Conservatives, he said, advocated pure-going Toryism with a policy three hundred years behind the times. The Reform scheme was the only constructive one—office would be taken by non-partisans who had a record of great national service—partisanship and sectionalism would be avoided. Scott stated that the former member would do well in vaudeville but his proposed system tends toward the "mangling" of the Commons. All parties admit that the Senate is essential and that it stands in the way of malicious legislation. To be effective, however, it must have full power, as an inflated tire to absorb the shocks of the government.

"La Jargue Francaise" was the medium adopted by the Hon. R. J. Moussau from Quebec in most eloquently upholding a National Policy of reform. He summed up the features of the motion and the amendment. The Government, though adopting a decision born from experience represented the political desires of the agricultural section. The Conservatives, a sleepy body, upheld the interests of the aristocracy and trusts of the Ontario and Quebec centres. The Reformers advocated a truly National idea which could be maintained only by the elective system, and the Hon. member crossed the floor to their support.

Herbert saw the good points of the Irish constitution but these could not be applied to Canada with success. Progress is good but it must come in its proper time.

"Absolute veto is a blot on the principles of freedom" said the Hon. MacLeod. Reform is necessary, the senate must not retain absolute power it must accede to the countries wishes, is should be more nearly an advisory board. Under the present system a non-partizan House is impossible, the Government nominates its own supporters, the body acquires partisanship and apathy. Elections are impossible for they would be expensive, they would necessitate a widening of constituencies which would require

To show the power of Good societies, Mr. Paton mentioned statistics in a booklet on Juvenile Delinquency which showed that during the war, out of 6,020 English delinquents, only 269, or slightly four per cent belonged to Clubs, whereas forty per cent of the boy population were connected with some club or other. In his final point, Mr. Paton showed the great awakening which comes to adolescents—the time when the glory of the universe is shown to him, and he feels the presence of God. At twelve years of age, William Penn had just such an awakening, but it is not confined to great men, but comes to all. The adolescent now makes his own religion instead of accepting one given to him. In final words of advice, Mr. Paton said that the parents and teachers must treat him lovingly. He needs great privacy sometimes and should get it, but above all, let him feel the sympathy of one older than himself who has had to fight his own way through the doubts and troubles of this life.

PHARISEES SADDUCEES AND ESSENES

Ancient Sects Subject of Masterly Address

LOUIS FITCH K.C.

Prominent Local Lawyer Speaks Before Macabean Circle

The Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes were the subject of Mr. Louis Fitch's talk when he addressed a small but a select portion of the Macabean Circle last night. Undoubtedly, the other stellar attractions influenced many to desert the Macabean, but those who did hear Mr. Fitch's address found that they could not have spent their evening in a more profitable way.

The speaker in introducing his subject, remarked that he could speak on nothing better than a Jewish subject for Jewish students. The Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes, he said, were three ancient groups of Jews each of which had definite views on politics and religion. The Sadducees had been an old established element in Jewish community long before the others and that is why he said he would discuss them first.

The Sadducees, the speaker pointed out, were the aristocratic priesthood of the people, and since the church and state formed a single element, they dominated Jewish affairs. They were the political and the worldly people recruited almost exclusively from the Aristocracy. They were the materialists of their time, denying the resurrection of the body or the immortality of the soul. The Sadducees claimed for themselves the practice of all religious ceremonies, while the majority of the people were not permitted to exercise their beliefs. They believed that they only were capable of praying to God.

The control of all foreign policy treaty making, the declaration of war or peace was in the hands of the Sadducees. On account of their power and beliefs, the common people were an-wealthy contenders, and they would follow the same Party Lines as the Lower House. He supported the making of the absolute veto suspensory, adjustment would come before the expiry of the two-year period.

Owing to the lateness of the hour a limit was put on the number of speakers. Goldenburg from the cross-benches contended that under the present system the Senate became a "refuge of reward" for party politicians. An undue interruption was caused by the somewhat noisy entrance of late arrivals who did not show proper consideration and courtesy.

Hon. Goforth went back to the regime to show the stabilizing effect of a check system of administration. Remarking on the Hudson Bay project, he showed that completion of the proposed scheme but bring nothing but loss, the expenses would be greatly in excess of the benefits which would arise from the shipment of some ten per cent of the grain produce, and the Senate, in this case showed its value in its maturity of judgment.

The progressive conditions of Canada, said Alexander, shows that the present senatorial system has outworn its usefulness. In these chambers are found the older men,—men who have served their country well but whose ideas and viewpoints are growing more and more ancient as compared with the vigorous, progressiveness of young Canada.

The leader of the opposition, the Hon. Grant Glasco, showed that the Conservative policy is old, well-established, yet always "abreast of the times." The Maritimes at Confederation approved of the present system. "Are we going to add another reason for secession by withdrawing their greatest safeguard?" The poorly-distributed population must have equitable representation for their sparsely settled areas. Further, the provinces have not been consulted on the matter.

Schwiberg of the Reformists'viewed with dismay the depleted ranks of the Government" as well as the thick (or dense) line of the Conservatives. He stated that his party, rather than allow the schemes which the Conservatives would adopt had they the power, would lend their support to the Government though retaining their identity as a separate unit.

Hon. Prime Minister Lloyd contended that abolition was no part of their policy and that the support of the Provinces would be sought in its proper time after the Bill had been properly passed in the House. The minority would not lose its power in the revision. It is not good that any body, not elected by the people nor responsible to them, should have absolutely power of veto. The secession talk is merely a scare which comes up regularly at difficult times. One of the most heated and hard-fought session of the "Mock" came to an end with the closest division he'd for years, made necessary by the resounding choruses of "Ayes" and "Nays", and the combined government and reform parties joyously greeted the news that the small, but effective, majority was on their side.

tagonists to them. Their policy made the daily life of the people uninteresting, not very colorful and sad. The Sadducees held on to their power as long as the Jewish state lasted. The knowledge of this group of people is gained largely from inferences and from the revolutionary changes which the Pharisees introduced.

The Pharisees who were the religious party, embraced the mass of the Jewish people. They were responsible for the reactionary movement which followed the Sadducees. They were reactionary in religion beliefs only, insisting upon a return to the Biblical traditions. The priests kept all the traditions for themselves, and the Pharisees had to fight for these privileges for the people. They believed in the resurrection of the body for the immortality of the soul. This sect appealed to the people not only because of its interest in learning and spreading the interest of acquiring knowledge.

The religious nature of the Jews goes back to the teachings of the Pharisees. It was this sect which introduced the ceremony of lighting the Sabbath candles in the Jewish home. Many of the changes which they introduced, helped to make the life of these Jew a more interesting and happier one.

The most absorbing of the three groups are the Essenes who lived apart from the people and did not marry. Their life as an organization did not exceed a century, their power was nil, and yet they interest us from the cultural viewpoint. They were primarily, the forerunners of monasticism. The Essenes practiced communism amongst themselves and spent their lives in meditation being very strict in the observance of some Jewish traditions, but they disregarded many others. Their belief in celibacy is a non-Jewish trait. They flourished about the same time as the Pharisees, but they were not a pure Jewish strain as the latter were.

The Essenes lived a Spartan life and their old age in deep study they were able to make prophecies many of which came true. They also believed in the immortality of the soul, the existence of a physical heaven and hell, and the resurrection are excerpts from Essenism.

Mr. Fitch closed his address stressing the point not to think of the Sadducees, the Pharisee and the Essenes as three sects or philosophies but as three groups which moulded an enormous influence on Jewish life, and the result of which has been felt throughout the generation.

During the discussion, the question was raised whether the Essenes were the first to condemn slavery. Mr. Fitch pointed out that the Essenes were communists in the pure sense of the word, and in communism, there is no place for slavery. To be a master, he said, was considered a sin in the Essenic point of view.

The president of the Circle, Mr. B. Cohen thanked the speaker on behalf of the Macabean for his excellent address; and he stated that since the academic subject on the programme proved such a success, he would try to frame more of such subjects for future meetings of the Circle.

McGill Daily

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the Students' council I wish to express, through the columns of the "Daily", our appreciation to two members of the student body who have assisted the Council in a particularly fine manner this year.

Mr. Douglas Everett, who supervised the collection of material for the Students' Directory which has recently been published and Mr. Reid, who was in charge of the Federated Charities Campaign for the student body were both very efficient in the handling of their duties and we wish to extend to them our thanks for their co-operation.

Yours very truly,

The Editor

McGill Daily

Dear Sir, The appearance on the front page of the Daily of Dec. 17th of an article headed "Ladies will be admitted to Smoker" is very much regretted by the women students of McGill. This statement puts them in a cheap and altogether wrong light. In the first place it would appear that the women students were exceedingly anxious to attend a "smoker" and witness the "many fine bouts" promised for the evening. Whereas, if the truth were known there is little if any interest displayed among women students in the direction of these sports, which are not, we might say, of a particularly amusing or pleasant nature.

In the second place there seems to be a misconception of the facts regarding the issuing of student tickets. The members of the M.S.P.E. are the only women students who this year have had the privilege of holding tickets to the various branches of sport, this is due to the fact that the observation of many of these sports is part of their training, but we understand that members of the M.S.P.E. are not expected to attend sports under such conditions as these.

No other women students of McGill hold these tickets, and for the reason that ring sports are neither entertaining nor interesting to the women students as a body. We very much regret the appearance of the article under this heading and also of the special notice on the same page. The undignified light in which the women students are placed by such statements has been commented upon by persons outside the student body, and we therefore feel that those who arrange and advertise these affairs should be more careful in their statements and facts.

Sincerely yours,

ball was then carried to the Y. W. end where several attempts were made to score. The R. V. C. guards checked well and the ball was carried up to the visitors' end of the field. N. McMartin scored a goal soon after Miss Conney scored for the Y. W. R. V. C. scored again and Miss Conney once more retaliated with a very spectacular shot from the field. The play was even, the ball being carried up and down the field, but it was marred by a good deal of fumbling. Y. W. scored on a free shot, then after some hard play, N. McMartin scored two goals for R. V. C. The Y. W. scored again and R. V. C. added six points to their score. A double foul was awarded but no points were made. N. Mc-Martin showed up well, making several more goals. The Y. W. centres exhibited some good combination and another goal was scored, but the period ended with R. V. C. well in the lead, the score standing at 24-9.

During the second period the scortwelve points while the Y. W. scored eleven. For the first few minutes

Abrahams scored and the ball was then kept in the centre of the field deal of fumbling, and the Y. W. scored the hope that they would be able ively short time.

who spoke at the Educational Conference in Toronto in 1923, was also interviewed by Major Ney, and hopes to be able to accept the Council's invitation to address a series of meetings in western Canada at an early date.
